

April 19, 1948

Mr. James Strachey
41 Gordon Square
London W.C.1
England

Dear Mr. Strachey:

After receiving your letter I have thought and thought and it occurred to me that you may have been thinking of what Otto wrote about "Analysis Terminable and Interminable" in "Problems of Psychoanalytic Technique", pp. 115 to the end. There isn't anything specific referring to the sentence "der Analysierte selbst kann nicht alle seine Konflikte in der Uebertragung unterbringen," but nevertheless these pages in the technique book are the only typed comments that I could find. I looked through all the periodicals where there are reviews: Quarterly, Psychoanalytic Review, etc., but there isn't anything. I hope very much that when you read these pages you will find that they were what you had been looking for.

Wishing you the best all around and kindest regards to you and Mrs. Strachey, I am

Sincerely yours,